BIOGRAPHY

Ryan de Quintal began his acting career in 2005 while attending California State University Fullerton. He received his BA from CSUF in Radio, Television, & Film. Ryan appeared in over 40 short films while attending college, which provided him with a wonderful training ground to hone his craft and work with directors. He trained in the Meisner technique with veteran actor and Actors Studio member Robert Miano. Ryan is a polyglot versed in Russian, Belarusian, Ukrainian, and Spanish in addition to English. His special skills include stage combat, horseback riding, weapons training, and a large variety of accents.

"Success is an eventuality if you work hard and continue to challenge yourself creatively."

STAGE WORK

On the stage, Ryan has had the good fortune of appearing in lead roles that challenged him immensely and pushed him into stepping up his abilities as a performer. Similar to his work in front of the camera, his roles in the theatre have all been wildly different.

FOOL FOR LOVE

THE DOGS POND

His theatre work began in the 2014 production of True West. Ryan played the troubled writer Austin in the play. In 2018, he appeared in John Steinbeck's Of Mice and Men, playing the role of George. He followed up that performance with The Dogs Pond, written by Travis G. Baker. He took on the role of Carter, a hipster craft beer entrepreneur. In 2019, he portrayed Eddie in Sam Shepard's Fool For Love. For that role Ryan learned how to rope and lasso.
